Preface

The purpose of the release of the “Greenland Pilot - Explanations of the place names” has been to bring together all the information about the Greenlandic place names, and to provide users of the newly released West Greenland charts to find out about the significance of the place names.
The new charts use new Greenlandic orthography as opposed to the older charts as well as some publications that use old Greenlandic orthography.
The “Greenland Pilot - Explanations of the place names” have been prepared on information on place names in ”Den grønlandske Lods I, Vestgrønland“, “Den grønlandske Lods, 2. del, Østgrønland“ and “Den grønlandske Havnelods“. (Only in Danish). All place names have been reviewed and updated by Oqaasileriffik – The Greenland Language Secretariat.
The publication includes “translation“ / explanation in English of Greenlandic place names specified with both new and old Greenlandic orthography.
Latin names regarding the Greenland fauna is taken from the book ”Grønlands fauna, Fisk-Fugle-Pattedyr”, by B. Muus, F. Salomonsen and C. Vibe. Published by Gyldendal 1981.
Latin names regarding Greenlandic flora is taken from the book ”Grønlands blomster, Flowers of Greenland”, by J. Feilberg, B. Fredskild and S. Holt. Published by Ahrent Flensburgs Forlag 1984.

The publication is published only as an Internet publication and can be downloaded free of charge at www.gst.dk.

Corrections to this publication will be published in Danish Chart Corrections on www.gst.dk.

GST publishes charts covering Danish, Greenlandic and Faroese waters. The following publications are published in Danish and English: Kort 1 · INT 1 [1] (symbols, abbreviations and terms used on charts), Behind the Nautical Chart [1] (surveying, reliability and use) and Danish Chart Corrections [1].
The following publications are published in Danish only: Catalogue of nautical publications including Index Danish charts and Index Greenlandic and Faroese Charts, Sailing Directions concerning Danish, Greenlandic and Faroese waters. Updated information on all Danish harbours and bridges can be accessed on www.danskehavnelods.dk.
Information on current editions of charts and latest print of these is given continuously on www.gst.dk.
Publication of charts (new editions, updated reprints and new charts) is announced in Danish Chart Corrections.
Updated reprints do not cancel the previous print of the same edition but due to the continuous correction work users are advised to order updated reprints. When extensive changes occur the charts will be published as new editions, which will cancel the previous edition.
As updated charts are most important for safe navigation users are recommended to keep charts updated and always use the latest edition.
Cancelled charts and publications should not be used as EfS, Danish Chart Corrections and supplements to the publications only refer to the latest edition.
Please note that corrections to charts after the date of printing must be carried out by the user.

Updating

GST publishes Danish Chart Corrections weekly, describing in Danish and English the corrections necessary for the maintenance of charts and publications. Danish Chart Corrections can be accessed on www.gst.dk.
EfS brings information of significance to navigation, including information of preliminary and temporary character. Part of this information may be of importance to charts and publications and should be added as amendments or remarks. Users of Danish Chart Corrections with internet access can free of charge download the publication to their own PC or print corrections from the GST website.

1) Free publication on www.gst.dk.

Greenlandic place names

Generally about Greenlandic place names

Most Greenlandic place names are a description of the nature or appearance of the location in question rather than an actual name for the place. The same individual place names can therefore be found in virtually all inhabited areas along the Greenland coasts, and they are often so close together that it can be difficult sometimes to distinguish between places with the same name and explain which of them is being referred to in the given case.

On the other hand, Greenlandic place names can sometimes provide information about the appearance and uniqueness of the named location, and can thereby help one to orient oneself when off a part of the extensive coast of Greenland, of which one may have no prior personal knowledge. In order to exploit the aid to navigation that may result from the Greenlandic place names included in the charts, this publication includes list with the English “translation” and/or explanation of the Greenlandic place names occurring in publications and charts.

Changes to place names

It must be expected that during a transitional period, Greenland Pilot uses place names spelled in both the old and new Greenlandic orthography. Any Danish name will be provided in brackets, e.g. Nuuk (Godthåb) or a Greenlandic place name may be added, e.g. Orsiivik (Polaroil), Tuttut Nunaat (Renland), Aqissip Kangertiva (Rypefjord), Nannut Qeqertaat (Bjørneøer), Kangertittivaq (Scoresby Sund) and Kangikajik (Kap Brewster).

Furthermore, it must be expected that the new charts of areas that are not currently covered by the charts will contain new names that are not found in Greenland Pilot. It is also likely that Greenland Pilot will contain place names that do not appear on the charts.

In the coming years, place names will be officially changed from Danish to Greenlandic for e.g. large fjords, coastal or land areas along the coasts of Greenland. Kronprins Christian Land will become Nuna Kronprins Christian, and Kejser Franz Josef Fjord will become Kangerluk Kejser Franz Josef.
